

The Pacific Islander
Biospecimen
Education
Project

A PROJECT OF WINCART

Weaving an Islander Network for Cancer Awareness Research and Training

A large, light gray magnifying glass graphic is positioned behind the text, with its handle pointing towards the bottom left and its lens centered over the first paragraph.

Project description: Educating our Pacific Islanders on the importance of biospecimen research, which uses body tissue to learn how to prevent, find, or treat cancer and other health problems.

This project will help us learn what our community thinks about the biospecimen education materials that we have developed and about donating biospecimens for research.

To participate: We are looking for those with Pacific Islander ancestry and 18 years or older.

Participants will help us assess the biospecimen educational materials that we developed by:

- > Watching a short education video
- > Reading a brochure
- > Filling out brief questionnaires about the materials

Participants will be compensated for their time and travel.

Participants will also have the option of taking part in an additional study about biospecimen collection.

Biospecimen donation is not required.

Interested in participating? Contact: